by Boxer and Coates, of material written at the 'dawn' of the eighteenth century, by Jesuit priest Antonil. It is a specialist book, inserted by Schwartz into its respective historical background, but it is by no means a dry academic work. It gives a vivid picture of sugar cane and tobacco plantations, gold and silver mining, and cattle breeding. It covers technical detail as well as broader aspects of business and human relations. It deserves very serious consideration as a source of information on this time period.

Antonil's great work, recognized as fundamental for understanding the colonial Brazilian economy, now available in its first English translation

“There is no book that better captures the social and economic basis of Brazil in its early history.” (Stuart B. Schwartz, Yale University) “Antonil's book is essential to understanding the society and economy of colonial Brazil and stands as one of the most important works from the colonial period in the Americas.” (Luiz Felipe de Alencastro, University of Paris-Sorbonne) About the Author ANDRÉ JOÃO ANTONIL (1649–1716) was an Italian Jesuit who lived in Brazil, mostly in Bahia, from 1681 until his death. TIMOTHY COATES is a professor of history at the College of Charleston. He is the author of Convicts and Orphans: Forced and State-Sponsored Colonization in the Portuguese Empire, 1550–1755 and (with Geraldo Pieroni) De couto do pecado grave; vila de sal: Castro Marim (1550–1850).
