Robinson, Josef Ackermann, Joseph Stiglitz, Kemal Dervis, Kenneth Rogoff, Mark Roe : Capitalism in Crisis before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Capitalism in Crisis:

1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. value reading with diversity from knowledgeable people...By Satya ChariFor any one interested in understanding the different dimensions of analysis, prognosis and suggestive way forward from the current economic malaise; this is a great and must reading.I respect the wisdom of these knowledge stalwarts and salute their integrity and generosity in sharing their invaluable knowledge and ideas.

More than four years after the onset of the global financial crisis, much of the global economy remains mired in low growth and high unemployment. At the same time, economists' spectacular failure to foresee crucial developments — from the collapse of the US housing market to the duration and depth of the Great Recession — has powerfully undermined the disciplines' models and assumptions. Amid mounting uncertainty and rising inequality — many are beginning to question whether modern capitalism is sustainable, or even desirable. In a new collection of articles, written exclusively for Project Syndicate, leading economists assess their field's future, and consider market-based capitalism's prospects in the post-crisis world.
