common womanIt took me a while to understand what the point was, but after a while, I realized that it was addressing the basic tenet of economics: Do people really act selfishly all the time? And if so, when do they and when not? Is it really in the best interest of a community for people to act entirely as individuals out for themselves? How does this affect our happiness and the health of our communities? The most interesting part was the study of cheating and how societies deal with cheating.1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. This is one of the best books written in the 21st centuryBy Michelle BrennerThis is one of the best books written in the 21st century. Tania Singer has done it again with sharing insight from cutting edge science. We are so lucky to have such wise and clever people in our world, to share their research, their views and their conversations. This book encourages a holistic view of economics a view that perhaps has been hidden from mainstream politics and the market place. I am inspired from the work being done all over the world, work that highlights how caring, compassion, economics and science can come together to make the world a beautiful place. Dreams in this book come to life, if we choose to go down the path these leaders are showing us.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five StarsBy Christopher LoganGood book. Came on time. No problem

A COLLECTION OF INTERNATIONALLY RENOWNED SCIENTISTS AND ECONOMISTS IN DIALOGUE WITH HIS HOLINESS THE DALAI LAMA, ADDRESSING THE NEED FOR A MORE ALTRUISTIC ECONOMYCan the hyperambitious, bottom-line-driven practices of the global economy incorporate compassion into the pursuit of wealth? Or is economics driven solely by materialism and self-interest? In Caring Economics, experts consider these questions alongside the Dalai Lama in a wide-ranging, scientific-based discussion on economics and altruism. Begun in 1987, the Mind and Life Institute arose out of a series of conferences held with the Dalai Lama and a range of scientists that sought to form a connection between the empiricism of contemporary scientific inquiry and the contemplative, compassion-based practices of Buddhism. Caring Economics is based on a conference held by the Mind and Life Institute in Zurich in which experts from all over the world gathered to discuss the possibility of having a global economy focused on compassion and altruism. Each chapter consists of a presentation by an expert in the field, followed by a discussion with the Dalai Lama in which he offers his response and his own unique insights on the subject. In this provocative and inspiring book, learn how wealth doesn't need to be selfish, how in fact, empathy and compassion may be the path to a healthier world economy.

"This work will be appreciated by readers who believe that human beings can and do act beyond their own self-interest?even in the economic sphere."?Library Journal"An intriguing report on unusual objectives pursued through outreach and debate."?Kirkus sAbout the AuthorDR.
