Lawrence Butler : Industrialisation and the British Colonial State: West Africa 1939-1951 before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Industrialisation and the British Colonial State: West Africa 1939-1951:

Taking colonial policy towards West Africa as a case study, Butler shows that, during the 1940s, the Colonial Office evolved a policy of encouraging colonial industry as part of a broad programme of development intended to prepare colonies for independence.
